

Nishima Kaplan is a fine artist trained at the oldest art school in the US, the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts. She works in watercolors, pastels, encaustic, paper collage, acrylics, ceramics, fabric arts, and more. Her contemporary, colorful style merges realism, abstraction, texts/words, and folk art crafting. She is also a talented illustrator.

Nishima graduated from the University of Pennsylvania in 1992 with a dual degree in Russian studies and Multinational Management from the Wharton School of business. Yet her “extra” figure drawing and sculpting classes brought her a taste for her deepest passion and destiny—to spend her days making art. She attended art school from 1993 to 1996 and has maintained an independent art studio since 1996. Her art business continues to evolve. Currently she is also studying to become a certified art therapist.
